SHALL WOMEN

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

St.—May I be allowed a few words on your editorial of Tuesday, the 23d. entitled "Jefferson on Women in Politica?"

We put forward no claim that Thomas Jefferson may not be quoted—and quoted pro and cont. His active mind touched every subject within the range of vision of the eighteenth entury. His was one of the eighteenth entury, His was one of the most actue and farseeing, liberal and enlightened minds of that century, and yet how many judgments of the eighteenth entury. His was one of the deposition of woman in the reaches appen science. Se stood for free thought of to-day is a far different thing, with a far vaster wing than he contemplated. He stood for democracy; but he had only the eighteenth entury type. The effertent thing, with a far vaster wing than he contemplated. He stood for democracy; but he had only the eighteenth entury type. The offered hought of to-day is a far different when the general position of woman—the eighteenth century sent by the opposition. To what government does he refer? To the French monarchy, which was then tottering to its fall. What "plans of reform" does he mean? He mean the effort of the people—the "third estate"—and of the more enlightened men of education and birth to trethemselves from the unspeakable corcuptions of that dominion of courtiers, noblesse, farmers-general and "ancient regime" generally. With these efforting who was in profound sympathy. He remained so, and profundly he remained the condition he was in sentiment a vepublican and revolutionit. To what women is he referring? Who does he fear will block reform? Is the woman—unspeakably oppressed—of the third estate? Is it the patriot women.—women like Madame Roland—who, even so carly as 1788, were preparing to suffer death for their causes. There is no reason to suppose that to the end Jefferson did not retain reverence and admiration for women like Madame Roland, for a woman like Charlotte Corday. Who are the women to whom he refers in this letter? They are renoultions of the past and the conditions of the the marries from the married with the free the married from the married was also as the power of the state of the property of the property of the state of the property of the property
